with cooking oil, fat, gas, gas flame, and trapped on and grease in the ventilation duct. These components combine together to make kitchen a favourite playground of fire. Constant vigil and regular maintenance of gas line, burners, ventilation ducts, and grease filters are the means to combat this menace. We discuss safety related to ventilation system and gas system as follows.

Ventilation system maintenance

Ventilation system is critical in maintaining proper hygiene and safety in a kitchen. Gas appliances should not be run if the ventilation system is not functioning properly. The following steps should be taken to minimize the risk of fire and reduce their severity in case it occurs:

- Kitchen ventilation hood system must be periodically cleaned.
- Old hood systems, if changed, should be replaced by a system with new improved designs which incorporate automatic wash cycles, minimizes pockets and crevices in the ductwork where dust and grease could accumulate.
